

Redondo Beach

We've only dove this site once, but we'll be back. There's a nice beach and a wall to gear up. The viz seems good and the current doesn't seem too bad, but I've been told to watch it during heavy exchanges. There is a lot of life here and the bottom is rocky so dive classes don't mess up the visibility. There are only about three parking spots on the beach but there is a reasonable amount of parking on the street nearby. There are restrooms and showers available.

We just geared up and headed out to about 50 feet and then headed left. I've had reports of ratfish and dog sharks here. I think it would be a great place for a night dive.